Meet Ms. Glosemeyer, St. John's 6th grade teacher

First alumna teacher joins the staff

As a student at St. John the Baptist Catholic School in Ms. McAlear's kindergarten class, Ms. Glosemeyer already knew she wanted to pursue a career in education. On her "Student of the Week" poster board, she included that she wanted to become a teacher when she grew up.

A St. Louis, Mo. native, Ms. Glosemeyer moved to Alabama with her family in 1997 as part of the BRAC relocation. She attended both St. John's and St. John Paul II Catholic High School. After high school, Ms. Glosemeyer attended the University of North Alabama where she received her degree in secondary education with a concentration in English language arts.

"Teaching is such a rewarding vocation because you are directly impacting the kids," said Glosemeyer. "I cannot be more thankful and blessed to be a part of a school that cares so much about the students."

From Fallfest to the Seder meal in 4th grade, to school dances and sports, Ms. Glosemeyer is happy to be back in the same halls she once walked as a student. She is excited to be teaching middle school because of the enthusiasm students bring to the classroom each day. Ms. Glosemeyer wants to support the students while also challenging them to reach their full potential.

"Being a student at St. Johns is more than being a good athlete or making the good grades; it is about having a well-rounded experience inside and outside of the classroom," said Glosemeyer.

When not in the classroom, Ms. Glosemeyer enjoys watching sports, DIY crafts and spending time with her family and friends.
